6. On his appointment as SLNG's new CEO, Mr McGregor said, "Our immediate priority will be the execution and on-time delivery of Singapore's first LNG Terminal. I am looking forward to working with the Board and our widening customer base to grow the LNG Terminal's business in the future. In that regard, we have already started to focus on our organisational build-up to be ready for operations in 2013. In the long run, our aim is to develop this platform not only to meet Singapore's needs, but eventually for the LNG Terminal to become a gateway for LNG in Asia thereby becoming a Gas Hub for the Region."

7. Noting the importance of the LNG Terminal in enhancing Singapore's energy security and creating new economic opportunities, Mr Lawrence Wong said, "As trustee shareholder of SLNG, EMA has been directly overseeing the LNG project over the past year. Now that the project has reached its key milestones, it is timely to put in place new arrangements for the governance and management of the company. I am confident that the Chairman, Board members and CEO will provide the necessary experience and leadership to take the business on to the next stage of development.”
